

Abstract

5           A method and system for distinguishing an individual by employing anatomy and gait parameters is provided. The method includes acquiring image data of an individual, and computing a gait and/or an anatomy parameter of the individual from the image data. A match between the parameter of the individual and a particular parameter in a reference database is determined to distinguish the individual.

10

217177